R-R-R-Ring! R-R-R-Ring! The bell? No. That wasn't the bell; it was the phone. I answered the phone and said hello. "What?" I asked, "You heard about Standing Room Only! What was it you asked? Well, it was the focus of our year," I replied. "We are Standing Room Only because school enrollment had increased by the hundreds. This increase led to a greater amount of enthusiasm and crowds. No matter where we went, whether standing in a lunch line, an admission line for a game, or trying to get to a locker or to class, we met friendly outgoing, new people. The Standing Room Only crowds meant more spirit, as well as more fun, clubs, and sports. Talent, variety, friends — all were in excess because we were Standing Room Only!" "I feel that since we have more students in the school then more students can show school spirit," Ernie England stated.

The locker area crowds are jam-packed. Garry James. Tim Allison, and Amelia Armendaria enthusiastically work their way to their lockers.

Crowds usually cause confusion, but these students know where they are headed. July Everett, Crystal Jones, Duane Dunmire, Jenky Heath, Jonatha Weight, and John Hickey purpose to go to homeroom.

The Way We Were The School term began later than usual this year. On September 8, the homeroom bell rang at 7:55 a.m. Many questions were asked, and by the end of the week, most knew the answers. Over the next week, everyone had an idea of the styles this year and where to go on the weekends. From short skirts to sweaters, football games to parties, most changed their lives from spending six hours on the beach to spending six hours at their desks. Everyone arrived at school with ideas, ambitions, and new clothes. Everyone talked about what they did the weekend before.

The social lives of some of our students revolved around school, while others looked elsewhere for fun and action. We always enjoyed seeing our friends and being with them while we were at school. Brian Evans remarked, "The only reason I came to school was to see my friends." 5 feet 16 inches

Because we wanted to have some type of life after high school, we tried to do our best in the classes we were taking. Kim Perry hinted that her favorite class was a vocational class and Allen Durgin remarked that he liked Drama best.

Stand Tall

In The Name Of Spirit

"We're number o-n-e in s-p-i-r-it." The chant rang throughout the stands during a football game. The screams were of joy or perhaps, desperation, but nonetheless, the crowd continued to scream encouragement.

North Stafford has always had something to cheer about. According to senior Erin McCool, "School spirit didn't stop with just supporting the football team. People supported other athletic teams as well as academic ones." School spirit has made North Stafford unique. We have built an image of a school with letters. Juntor Josh Parish expressed, "It's great we have everything from Battle of the Brains to the Golf team." Jumbers have never made the records; the individuals have. For every the involved effort was the underliable element.

So pice again in the spring of 1988, we will turn our backs on the doors of North Stafford. Some of us will return others will move on, but no matter there we go, we will still tear the pirit and the echoes of the WOLVERINES!

Geoffrey Hannon, Lennard Tolson, and Trey Edwards break through the sign with enthusiasm. What a to start a game.

Everyone needs friends. We need friends for many reasons. Through good and bad, true friends adhere. Those are the friends we never forget Some friends we may never see again, but there will be those cert in people that will remain with you past high school. Those are the onestinal will be in a "special" place in your heart.

What does it take to be that special friend? Dana Neilsen, Kelly Cook, and Julie Fenner felt that honesty was the best policy. You should not judge people, just accept them for whom they are. You should not judge people, just accept them for whom they are. You should not judge people, just accept them for whom they are. You should not judge people, just accept them for whom they are. What makes friends so important? Michelle Alkin c inf ded that "friends are so important because without friends, your life would be boring, no one to talk to, have fun with, laugh, cry, tell your most inner thoughts to, you wouldn't have anyone. A friend is someone you can trust, and someone who you know will be there in good and bad. I agreed I asked Kerri Burpo what she thought. First Few Days of School

Can you stand it!

When everyone got together at the start of school pandamonium arose. The start of school meant reuniting with old friends, a chance to compete in school sports, and to some a chance to excel academically. Doug Baggett explained his concern about the beginning of school with, "I wondered how I was going to do academically." What would I wear? Who would I know and meet from the year before, and what would my teachers be like, were all common questions among the students.

The first few days of school were a rush of confusion. David Sulentic confessed the most confusing aspect at the beginning of school for him was, "getting used to my schedule." Friends rushed about to find and meet old friends. Teachers were organizing their newly formed classes in the middle of all the confusion.

With this new school year came changes in teachers' and students' lives. Jokingly, Mrs. Farmer stated, "now I had to get up early." When Lisa Ford was asked what was the biggest change for her, she replied, "things I wanted to do had to be scheduled around school." Mr. White's main comment about the first few days of school was, "those were days definitely to be remembered."

"The Start Of A Bad Day"

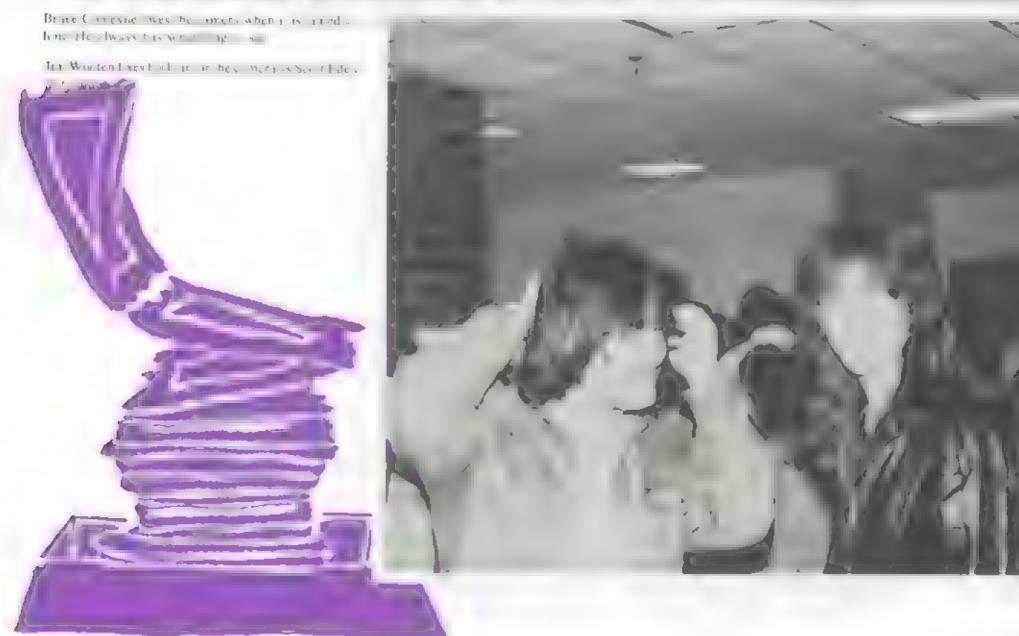

"Things didn't always go right"

As high school students, we knew what it was like when things went wrong before school. These were everyday problems that we had experienced throughout the year. For example, the trustworthy alarm clock we relied on for years failed to wake as and we overslept. Then, we had our transportation problems. Some of us who drove to school had flat tires, ran out of gas, couldn't find our keys, or our vehicles simply wouldn't start. Also, there were those of us who tried to catch the bus in the morning, but missed it because we were not outside on time. A few reasons for not being prompt were; we forgot to brush our teeth. we were doing our hair, or we misplaced our books and had to look for them. Bruce Comevne stated, "One morning I was coming to school and ran out of gas. I was only a couple of hours late." "One evening I left my parking lights on and when I went to leave for school the next morning. my battery was dead, laughed Jolic Menear "I had a flat tire one morn ing" exclaimed Tina Weavers Those lucky individuals who made it to school on time, but forgot to complete the last nights homework, had problems finding friends to borrow it from "I didn't know I had government homework and I had to rush through it before school," stated Thomas Whitlow, After all of this happened, we still kept our chins up and felt this was only one day and there was always tomorrow

Under Pressure

Driving During School

There were students in this school who did not sit around a classroom for every class period. For twenty-two days eight students got to go outside and actually "Drive" Of course there were rules, you had to have a learner's permit, "And a foot to press the gas peda!" replied senior Gregg Wallhumer.

These students got to drive out on the driving range and twice on Route 1. When sophomore Scott McNair was ready to go on the road he was surprised, "Coach Trant was really relaxed and nice. He didn't try to scare me in any way."

The students liked the class a lot except when they had to drive the brown truck "The brown truck has no power steering which made it really hard to do the exercises" exclaimed junior Andrea Stephens. Another thing that the students disliked was to parallel park. Senior Mike Hobbs explained, "I hated it because after I rolled my car back and forth twenty-five times I was still about four feet away from the curb,"

One thing the students all agreed on was that the class was fun "The class was like a little break from schoo" stated Shawn Schmidt who was looking forward to his classroom training so he could hurry and get his license. To all the students this was their chance to gain a little more freedom Dalphene Parks, the range instructor, had a very positive attitude about all the students she had taught and concluded with the statement, "I truly hope that they develop into sale and responsible drivers." This class was not only fun for the students, but it also taught them safe driving habits.

Best Foot Forward

Setting out on foot, people were headed in all directions, on their way to classes, the lunchroum, and to after school practice. The halls were all crowded, especially the tocker area. Our feet were always being stepped on by students rushing to class. When people stepped on the back of our shoes, we got frustrated and dain't know what to do. Kendall Brannock stated, "I like feet because they give me a reason to buy shoes."

Everyone uses their test whether it be for running to class, participating in school sports, or the fency foot-work of POM-PONS. Greg Jackson inferred that "Feet are necessary for playing soccer," and Troy Lipesey agreed. Feet were expected to be functional.

Feet don't always smel, or look wonderful because they pick up dirt. Ed Wendling joked, "I don't like it when girls take off their shoes in class, it's unnecessary."

Self-conscious peopte such as Stephanie Hornung tried to hide their feet. On their other hai d Sardi Barksdale bragged, "I like my feet because they are cute and little "People with larger feet, commonly called "BOATS" were not so proud of them.

Lunch Experience

Eating On The Run

Five minutes till' the bell. It was almost lunch time. As the bell rang everyone rashed out the door toward the cafeteria, to have the "group" table (the one we've had prearranged since receiving our schedules), or be the first in line for the days special, or grab something from the snackbar and make the usual "Hey, what's up?" rounds (making sure to hit all the spots.)

After the whole group arrived, you'd head for the line. During the 5-10 minutes you waited you catch up on the latest, that monstrous Human. Phys. test or how tough I nglish was, "We usually talk about the latest couples and who broke up with who," states Nicole Brown.

Finally it was back to the table where the chair search began "Trying to find a chair was the worst thing about the lunch," states sophomore Matt Bestick. By the time you got around to actually eating lunch, your 25 minutes had dwindled down to 3 or 4. So it was a race to linish, take up the tray, and don't torget, "Green on green, yellow on vellow," and off to your next class.

Graffiti Young Man's Media

'-It was fund Tivery body did it," stated Sherr Borson Graffiti was a form of self expression done by the meek as well as the bold; sometimes done in secretar by whole groups of people.

Grafter was everywhere. It was tound on notebooks, clothing, on bathroom doors, lockers, and the student parking lot.

Graffiti was written in public places for everyone to read. For example, on notebooks, the most common phrases were from the heart, reading, "Johnny loves Jackie — True love always" and "My heart is forever with Charles and Charles Jr."On jeans and shoes were written phrases such as "Go Home Communists!" and "I Love Turkey Sandwiches!" In bathroom stalls, the most common thing seen was "Ginger is a babe" and "I hate Henry!"; and in the student parking lot was "North Stafford is #1" and "The Class of '88 rocks till it hurts!"

Jenny Smythe considered graffiti "Visual Pollution and Vandalism". The world should not have been a tablet for self expression, but who could resist inscribing their honey's name and a heart on an old oak tree or on a vacant spot for the world to read.

Spirit Week

"Moving into Position

The pace was set. North Stafford was ready to move into position for Homecoming '87. The enthusiasm was there and everyone was ready to go. Tuesday was just the beginning of an exciting and eventful week, When we all reached school that day, it seemed that many of us wore to represent Twin Day. Nerds invaded us on Wednesday while Thursday brought us back to the first day of kindergarten. Lunch boxes, crayons, and name tags were just a few of the essential things needed for this day. Finally on Triday, the entire school had a chance to dream wrange and blue Everything from blue have to orange tenus shoes represented our spirit. Friday was also the day Seniors enjoyed the traditional I. nor of wearing hats and lalasses to school.

The Thursday might pen fally was just a preview for Friday night. The Wolverine spirit and enthusiasm soured. We were ready to take on the world. The band entertained us with their music while the cheerseeing double. Finding a friend and leaders had no trouble showing us dressing alike seemed the bear way the meaning of spirit. Class skits took place and all fall sports teams were introduced. The Pom Pon Squad ended the evening with a rou-Tune that spirited everyone.

Coming Home

A Reason to Celebrate!

When asked what "Homecoming" meant SCA President Ernic England responded by saying. "Homecoming is a time when we can show our school spirit and a time we can reunite with former students." North Stafford students showed their school spirit all week but their cheers could really be heard Friday night.

The highlight of the night began with the parade of floats. This years theme was "Through the Years." The floats that were rated "number one" were the sophomore class, whose theme was Prehistoric North Stafford", and in the clubs category, the winner was SADD.

To top the halftime activities was the crowning of this years Homecoming Queen and King. All over the stadium, cheers were heard when Stephanie Hornung was crowned Queen and Dion Lee, King.

To wrap up Homecoming activities, the SCA held North Stafford's annual Olympics. Coming out on top, was the Ski Club, and one point behind came the Seniors. Saturday night brought this year's Homecoming dance, which was said to have the biggest turnout in North Stafford's history.

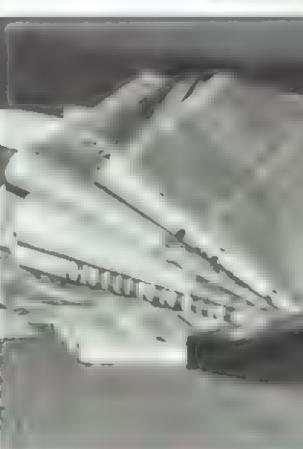

All in all, the spirit, the pride, and the successes made the 87-88 North Stafford Homecoming one that will never be forgotten

The Fashions I've Seen!

The last student of the '88 school year walked by me leaving behind silent halfways. Beme a double door my movements remained small but I knew what was going on. I overheard what people liked, saw what they work, and felt their textures. Bright and early they'd come my way and I'd welcome them openly. They were all dressed so mee in the morning Then that 2:15 bell would ring and BOOM! They slammed me against the wall. Rushing out to cars and busses with shirt tails out, wrinkled skirls, and wearing those cool sunglasses even on cloudy days.

I always knew when it was the first day of school. Everyone had on new clothes. They rattled my hinges shouting complements. "Hey, love your dress. Is it new?" "Nice shoes, can I borrow them sometime?"

When I started spotting the football jerselys, I knew fall was outside Fuzzy sweaters brushed by me and I thought how nice it must be to be wrapped in them.

winter rushed in quicker than ever before. The students ran to the warmth I held inside. Their bulky coats of wool, leather, and snug gloves looked warm as they rashed by Boots pounded as they ran All I kept hearing was, "I can't wait for spring."

Spring was welcomed wholehelitedly, jams and T-shirts were in "The beach look is back!" Their pale legs stood out like white does on black fabric, but soon they's be tan. It is was the time of year "spring feter" ran high. "Hey, lets skip and go lay out." "I wish school was

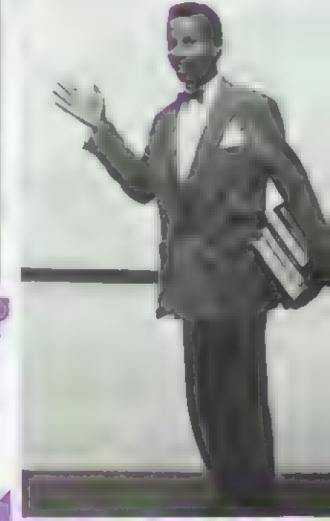

School was almost over und excitement rose with the coming of summer Girl, who's long huir tac brushed me all year, now had show hair. I suppose the will be cooled during the hot summer months

I remember the last day best. The analysis as the sensors prepared to say good bye to their high school life. The making of high school ended for them. But as for me, I think I'll just hang around and see what happens next year.

Taking a new direction ...

"How was your day, Robert?" the Cybernaut asked.

"It was hectic. Everything went wrong I was late to homeroom because the clevator from ground floor to sublevel twelve broke down. I lost my Biology diskette. To top it off, my computer malfunctioned during the big Alpha Centaurian History test!"

As you can see, school life in the sound exciting with to tuture might be different. For instance, getting to school might be ship, would still be the caster because transporter beams the high school expersion whisk you to school. The school just as it is in 1988, might become larger by having more floors and might go underground. In the classroom all work would be done on computer and all notes would be kept on diskettes.

Another thing that could happen to high schools is they might only be two years long. A student would be a freshman and a sophomore one year, then a junior and a senior the second.

North Stafford in 2088 may sound exciting with the technology of 2088, but the best part, friendship, would still be the major part of the high school experience in 2088, just as it is in 1988.

Mike Carson, Travis Sayers, and Lee Russell are getting a good laugh from talking about school life in the future Chance Bowling tries to rest up before making his long to homeroom. He doesn't seem worried that there is only one minute to the best

The Interclub council (ICC) was an organization consisting of the president and officers of each individual club. The ICC functioned in coordinating and carrying out service and social activities.

ICC participated in various activities throughout the year. The annual ICC Retreat, the Olympic Games, the Adopt a Grandparent Program, and the Sunshine Committee were examples of this years' activities.

Project Pride, a project for the beautification of our school; Peer Counseling, a group that consisted of student counselors; and The Drug Program which consisted of guests speaking on drug and alcohol abuse were three major programs that ICC accomplished. All activities of the ICC represented members of each club and the student body.

Battle Of The Brains

The Battle of the Brains was an academic quiz team composed of four members and one alternate. Members were chosen druing the fall by competing with other contestants from our school. The members of the 1987-1988 school year were James Asby (captain), Christy Gardner, Lenny Comaratta, and Jennifer Fischer. Success was based on quick recall of facts in fields of most academic classes. The teams sponsor was Mr. Rick Blackburn

Forensics

Forensics was an activity in which students competed at district, regional, and state contests in such areas as, poetry interpretation, extemporaneous speaking, and original oratory. A school-wide competition was held in December to ascertain which students would be fortunate enough to participate further

Throughout the '87-'88 year several students spent hours of rigorous training after school

National Honor Society

Founded in 1921, The National Honor, Society was an honorary club devoted not only to the school, but also to the community. The Society was based upon high standards of scholarship, service, leadership, and character. Participants maintained a quality point average of at least 3.6. In addition, members were required to participate in many school and community activities

The president was Sharri Braxton, Vice-President Laura Stapleton, Secretary Erin McCool. They all worked hard with their sponsor Betty Krapfl.

The Drama Club

The Drama Department at North Stafford High School has been designed to provide students with opportunities in the many creative aspects of the ater. There were three levels of Drama classes and one class in Technical Theater. Each year has been designed to include previous aspects of drama; building to the advanced class where the rearned knowledge was studied further. The technical class was separate from the others. This dealt with the technical aspects of theater. Students of this class studied skills such as stage de sign, costuming and much more

All students were invited to audition for the after school pro ductions Auditions and practices were gun in a professional man ner; participation demanded time and discipline. Many mem bers of the drama department were active in the International Thesplan Society. This was a world-wide organization that con centrate, on accume ating points through experience in the ater productions. Mr. Fred Franklin head of the Drama De partment comments: "The Dra ma Club appeared to be loosely knit bond, however, upon closer inspection it was a very light or ganization because it was only compased of the people who spent long and hard, hours producing theater '

Yearbook Flashback

Our students began the year with a great start. There was excellent participation in all extracurricular activities and everyone showed great school spirit and support. Students were very excited and started the year with new routines and different goals to set. For example, Seniors were faced with mailing in college applications and planning a successful future. Juniors were under a lot of stress as they prepared for SAT's, but they also looked forward to becoming seniors. Sophomores were still getting involved in clubs and activities. They also couldn't wait to finally become upper classmen. The Freshman class spent most of their year adjusting to high school, meeting new people, and making a lot of new friends. Although we were individual classes, we stood together throughout the year.

The Senior Class of 1988 was by far a most awesome class. Seniors showed their school spirit at pep ralkes and their support of the underclassmen. They became a close-knit group through many senior activities such as the Homecoming float, the Senior Christmas Dance, selling candy as fundraisers, the Senior Picnic, and preparations for graduation

The Senior Class officers were: President — Rikk Yeoman; Vice President — Shani Bishop, Secretary — Stephanie Hornung; Treasurer — Rhonda Wilson; and Reporter

Becky Goss. These students led the Senior Class through a fun and successful year

In June, the seniors will be leaving their friends to go off in their separate ways; either off to college, taking on a job, or just taking a break before the move into the "real world"

Instead of thinking positive this person thought of the negative or somehow this person believed nothing would turn out right, or often cut themselves down as well as others. Even though these people thought this year wouldn't work out. These people were our class pessimists.

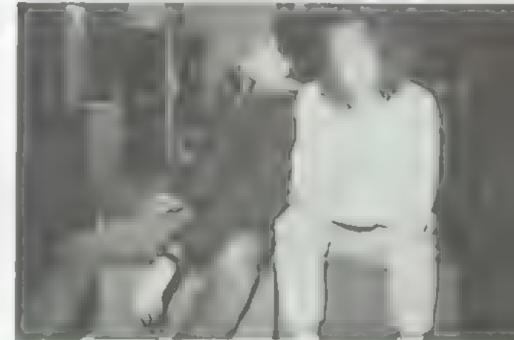

Often this person had a sense of humor and was friendly. This person showed characteristics of being an Individual. These people were known to have the best personality

Every class has one; they were the ones who sat and never said a word. Perhaps they were trying to tell us we were too loud A, though the Senior class was usu ally blamed for the noise, there was always one or two who went unheard. These people were known as the most quiet.

Tracey Horstkamp and Christine Hudson view their pessimistic world

Anthony Rifey and Stephanie Hornung have no trouble showing off their good personalities.

Karen Mattews and Eric Stafford tell everyone to join them is their quiet world

The Junior Class

The Junior Class had an exciting but busy year. They sponsored a dance and participated in many other fundraisers to help finance the Junior-Senior Prom. The officers traveled to Richmond and picked out a band to play at the prom and they also selected a theme and decorated the cafeterial actordingly.

Many Juniors had the provilege to drive to school instead of having to ride the dreaded buses each morning. One of the more exciting events for the Juniors was receiving their class rings but the most exciting part of the year were the days the Juniors anxiously awaited to become Sen

The Regretted Restriction

nother weekend behind bars for Jimmy Spellman, Doug Graber, and Eric Menke

It was eight o'clock and I pretended like I was sick to fool my parents. My parents went to bed at nine o'clock and at nine-thirty I crawled out my window There was a big party fonight, and my parents would not let me go out. I thought sneaking out was the best thing to do. I got to the party and thirty minutes later it was busted, I left the party disappointed from all the trouble I had gone through to go there, When I got to my house and crawled into my bed room, my parents were watting for me. Apparently my parents had heard the sirens and they worked up; only to see that I was not in bed

This incident was only one occasion, but there were many more, including getting bad grades, lying to parents, coming home late, and getting in trouble at school. Hopefully, not many students spent time on restriction this year

Class Rings

Will you turn my ring?" cried Angela Firkins Whose going to lock your ring?" asked Mike West These famous lines echoed through the halls of North Stafford during the last weeks of November. The excitement and anticipation built within the class of '89; the guys wondering what it would be like wearing a band of metal around their finger and the girls wondering if their stone will be the right color or whether it would clash with their other rings. Finally, you received your ring; It was either too big or too small something had to be wrong! It was never perfect. In all of its imperfections your high achool class ring was still the perfect symbol to show that you were a part of the Junior Class; a class that in itself was very special

The Sophomore Class

The 1987-88 school year signified a rekinding of enthusiasm for the Sophomore Class. We felt that the emotion and energy that had been shown in previous years began to resmerge. The Sophomore Class also seemed to become more of a unit this. year, being drawn more closely together by the successful completion of our fresh man year. This energy and closeness also showed in our class activities. We started off the year winning the homecoming float class competition with our arm. play of the Prehistoric Era, small con Prenistoric North Stafford Wessessa lasses during December bringing sime sanshine to those dream winter mint s and in February we held our annual can to sale. Flex Classes!

Flex class could bring horror to the ears of some people. How many people really would have liked to go to school an hour early or stay an hour later?

People at North Stafford took flex classes for many reasons. Some took flex so that they could get extra credits and graduate early. Others needed to take flex so they would have all the credits they needed.

For whatever reason, the people who took flex classes were brave and some times very fired people

Twins, Who's Who?

Twin births are one of the wonders of the world. There are, as most people know, two kinds of twins. The most obvious kind are identical twins. They may seem to look and talk aake, but most will swear to you that they are as inferent as night and day. Some twins are even mirror mades of each other such as one right handed and the other left or one having a dimple in the right heek and the other having a dimple in the left

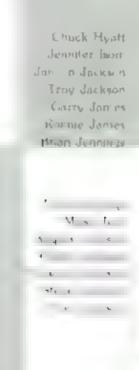

Fraternal twins, on the other hand, are little harder to spot. Some can look almost dentical but have tiny little differences Others can look very different. Some are even a boy and girl set

No matter if they are identical or fraternal twins, most will tell you they have a special kind of friendship

The names of some of these bands were White Nights, China White, Power Surge, and Tears. They all tried to get in at least two nights of pracnce a week. All of their hard work paid off when they got a chance to play live Terry Prater expressed, "If you don't believe in our music you can't be true to your aadi ence!" Be heve it or not, it was an educational trip as well as a fun one Between the occasional dunk: 3 of students and teachers, the students managed to catch enough fish to fill seven salt water tanks After a very long day of boating and beaching, both the students and the fish managed to find themselves a comfortable bed the fish in their tanks and the sta-Jents in their houses.

"Do you want to do something tonight."

"I can't, I have no money."
"Well let's borrow some!"

Some students got allowances from their parents while others worked and spent their own money. The question at North Staiford was, when you got money "how did you make your money last?" Shelly Smith said, "I shop around," and Laura Stapleton agreed by spending "as little as possible until I find a sale." Sherri Boisot expressed her opin ion by saying, "allowances went out with beil bottoms, I either beg for money or babysit!"

Did you know or did you have any idea that North Stafford was so big? Test Yourself! In the 1987-88 school year North Stal ford High School seemed to bare ly accommodate its 1930 students Through the year one might have thought the school was over browded, but with 1,996 lockers in the school there was just enough room for every one Although it seemed there was never quite enough room in the hallways and locker rooms, there was always plenty of bath rooms Believe it or not there were over 85 torets and 150 sinks. When you walked through the same halfs for years it was difficult not to realize the obvious, like the 174 steps, 100 trash cans, and more than 20 water fountains. However, have you ever stopped to consider the many trivia, things right on this campus, such as the 9 athletic fields, 8 tennis courts, a stadium seating 4 000 persons and many other fabulous faculties it was still hard to believe all of these things could have been found in the 293,000 square feet building on this 90 acre-campus, isn't triv ia so trivial

Big Bad Box Bonanza!

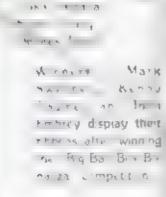

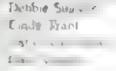

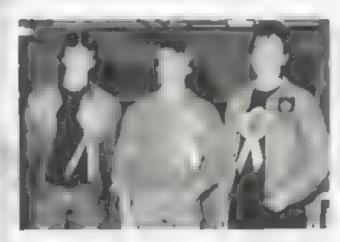

The Big Bad Box Bonanza was basically a test of five different skills - design, layout; camerawork, image-assembly and the ability to run a press. The project involved designing and eventually printing any type of container which served a use ful purpose. Students made a prototype of their container and then drew the plans for it. One could either use a fictitious product name and box design or use a real product and copy the design. After all the containers had been completed they were udged by faculty members, on the basis of creativity, printing quality, and final as sembly. The winner of this contest received a grant chocolate chip cookie, with a first place ribbon

The sports program in our high school allowed the students to participate in before and after school activities, practice sportsmanship, and have a good time. There was a wide range of sports offered to both boys and girls. They had to only meet the requirements of having an up to date physical and pass five subjects per-semester. Each athlete was expected to perform to the best of his or her ability, no matter what sport in which they played. They learned to accept defeat as well as victory, thus building good character. We had so many good teams backed by so many supporters, that there was STANDING ROOM ONLY!!

The tennis team's major accomplishment was a winning season for the first time in two years. After losing a game they talked about their mistakes and tried to make sure they wouldn't make the same ones again. But, winning was different. There was lots of screaming and yelling, especially for the first win of their season. When asked about the warm's spirit senior Stacey Burns remarked, "At first negative, but Coach Blackburn really psyched us up before matches and made us feel like we could win everytime if we put our minds to it." Everyone contributed to the wins, but six of the top players were: Christiane Holtz, Shelly Meares, Jenny DeBlash Michelle Liedel, Chuku Vashee, and Whitney Whirman.

A major accomplishment was when Rachel Hemmer broke the "most rebounds in a game" record against Stafford with twenty-three rebounds. When the team won they knew they deserved the win and they had really earned it. When asked about this year's team spirit. Christine Hudson remarked. "Throughout the season the team really fried hard to play as one unit. When it came down to cruch time, the team came through together.(

CHRISTMAS SING-ALONG

Remember the assembly when all of the teachers sang Christmas carols and Coach Blackburn directed the orchestra? Well, that assembly brought the Christmas joy out in everyone. People were saying "tis the season to be jolly" for days after that. After a while of listening to the faculty singing Christmas carols, the students joined in and everyone left that day with high spirits. Most assemblies or pep rallies were traditional throughout the year, but this special one changed a great many minds.

CHRISTMAS REINDEER!

The Materials and Processes Technology Students involved in making one-hundred wooden reindeer for Christmas this year. The profits went into supplies for other proects. Two class sessions were devoted to short practice runs on each part. Procelures were worked out and approved by the production manager and inspectors. After he "bugs" were worked out, production began. Each of the four classes served as four different work shifts. It took twelve fortyninute periods to complete one-hundred and five deer. Only ninety of them passed nspection.

As production took place, sales people planned advertisement schemes while deermining for all ninety reindeer, a fair sale orice. By Thanksgiving, all ninety reindeer were sold

NGLISH ASSISTANCE!

North Stafford was visited for the second ne by two English gentlemen. Melia Gerrd and Derik Brown were here to teach adents to write with more creativity. hey were really cool and taught us how to it things in perspective," replied Bruce omeyne. The first time they visited, achers found them quite effective with e students. Mr. Gerrard commented, chools in America are more structured d teachers don't seem to have the same xibility in terms of curriculum as they do England," Before returning to England, r. Gerrard and Derik Brown remarked. We had a wonderful time and we love the achers." All of our students enjoyed havg them and hope to see them again.

BUSINESS AS USUAL

"You started panicking. If you got off ome row there were just a bunch of letters and it didn't spell out anything. You got so ick of correction cape that you wanted to urn it. But I could type my research papers and I didn't have to ask anyone else to do it didn't have to sit there for two hours with wo finger typing. I typed everything then when you typed your papers you could see that you'd written and correct, it. If you entit out, you paid a lot. It's fun and I liked by teacher." These were a few of the feelings expressed by Allison Glace

Standing The The The Time To Say Goodbye! Shannon Maurice is ready to leave right after the last class has been dismissed

The time came when we had to say goodbye . . . For some, the farewell extended only for the summer, but for the seniors, it was a goodbye that was "permanent."

The goodbyes for the freshmen were pleasant ones because they were goodbyes that lasted only over the summer, the ending of being the lowest classmen, and knowing that in the fall there would be new freshmen to be harrassed. As Krystal Jones explained, "Saying goodbye meant I'd be leaving a whole bunch of friends for the summer but would soon be coming back for an even better year as a Sophomore!"

The sophomores had similar feelings about having to say goodbye. Many were relieved to say goodbye to those days when they could not drive. Although there were some nice things to say goodbye to, it was still not an easy thing to do. Jed Stapleton felt that saying goodbye meant "I'd move up to the upperclass." Jed also sees another less cheerful side of his becoming an upperclassmen, which was saying goodbye to the seniors, "I guess I'll miss my senior friends, but I'll make new senior friends next year,"

The class that was most excited about saying goodbye was the junior class. The juniors had been through three years of school and were finally ready to be at the top as seniors. Even though Billy Cimino gladly said "goodbye to junior life," he said that "next year as a senior I'll have an even harder time of saying goodbye."

After four years of high school, many seniors were ready to get out of school and go on with their lives, but there were also many who were not ready to say goodbye to their daily routines. The thrill of finally being on their own played heavily on many seniors' minds, but the feeling of loss at having to say goodbye to friends meant tears for many seniors. Mike Rawlings points out, "most of the senior class was like my family because I have grown up with them and it was hard to say goodbye, but I am counting on us keeping in touch!"

Each of us — no matter where or in what year — had to learn to say goodbye to some of the best days and times of our lives. Sheena Easton sang "It's hard to say it's over, it's hard to say goodbye," but with each goodbye we have gained not only memories, but experience, knowledge, and long-standing friendships!
